Adversary Proceeding No. 13-1068

F. Oliver Bondswell Cooper,

Plaintiff,

v.

Kathy Louise Watson, Trustee of the James S. Moore Family
Trust dated January 27, 1999,

Defendant.

MEMORANDUM DECISION REGARDING OBJECTION TO CLAIM AND COMPLAINT FOR DECLARATORY RELIEF

D. Max Gardner, Esq., of The Law Offices of Young Wooldridge, LLP, appeared on behalf of the debtor/plaintiff, F. Oliver Bondswell Cooper.

Andrew K. Sheffield, Esq., of the Law Offices of LeBeau & Thelen, LLP, appeared on behalf of the creditor/defendant, Kathy Louise Watson, Trustee of the James S. Moore Family Trust dated January 27, 1999.

1 Before the court are two related matters brought by the debtor, F. Oliver
2 Bondswell Cooper ("Cooper"). The first is Cooper's objection to a proof of claim filed 3 by Kathy Louise Watson in her capacity as trustee of the James S. Moore Family Trust 4 dated January 27, 1999 ("Watson"). The second is an adversary proceeding filed against 5 Watson for declaratory relief based on the same facts and circumstances. Watson's claim 6 is secured by a deed of trust against Cooper's residence and the adjoining property. The 7 underlying obligation originated 18 years ago. Cooper now disputes Watson's calculation 8 of the balance due and seeks a determination that the underlying obligation was modified 9 and partially forgiven in the settlement of a contested matter in a prior bankruptcy case.
10 The parties differ on their calculations by more than $55,000.<sup>1</sup> Neither party has a 11 complete record of the payments that have been made on the underlying obligation and 12 both are essentially asking the court to adjudicate a number which fixes the amount that 13 Cooper owed at the commencement of this case. The court has considered the arguments 14 of the parties, all of the admissible evidence, and reviewed the entire trial transcript. For 15 the reasons set forth below, Cooper's claim objection will be overruled and a declaratory 16 judgment will be entered for Watson in the adversary proceeding fixing her claim in the 17 amount of $92,484.49.

18 This Memorandum Decision contains the court's findings of fact and conclusions 19 of law required by Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 9014(c) and 52(a), made applicable
20 to this contested matter and the adversary proceeding by Federal Rule of Bankruptcy 21 Procedure 7052. The court has jurisdiction over this matter under 28 U.S.C. § 1334, 11 22 U.S.C. § 502<sup>2</sup> and General Orders 182 and 330 of the U.S. District Court for the Eastern

24 <sup>1</sup> In closing argument, Watson's attorney stipulated to reduce her claim to $92,484.49.
25 Cooper's attorney stated his prayer that the claim be allowed in the amount of $36,958.41.

26 <sup>2</sup> Unless otherwise indicated, all chapter, section and rule references are to the Bankruptcy 27 Code, 11 U.S.C. §§ 101-1330, and to the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, Rules 1001-28 9036, as enacted and promulgated after October 17, 2005, the effective date of The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005, Pub. L. 109-8, Apr. 20, 2005, 119 Stat.

1 District of California. This is a core proceeding as defined in 28 U.S.C.
2 §§ 157(b)(2)(A)(B) & (O).

3 Procedural Background. This dispute began with the filing of an objection to 4 Watson's proof of secured claim. Cooper disputes Watson's accounting of payments that 5 have been made and her calculation of the balance owed on the underlying promissory 6 note. Cooper contends that Watson failed to give him credit for all of the payments he 7 has made (the "Claim Objection"). In early proceedings, Cooper also argued that the 8 obligation to Watson had been partially modified and forgiven in the course of a prior 9 bankruptcy proceeding. Watson's accounting did not give credit for that transaction.
10 With regard to that issue, the court directed Cooper to file an adversary proceeding to 11 seek declaratory relief regarding the effect of the prior bankruptcy, and modification of 12 the loan documents if appropriate.

13 Cooper filed the related complaint seeking declaratory relief which incorporates by 14 reference the pleadings in the Claim Objection, but does not otherwise allege any specific 15 facts upon which relief could be granted (the "Adversary Proceeding"). Watson filed a 16 responsive pleading in which she agreed to amend her claim to a lower amount based on a 17 stipulated payment history the parties had entered into after the Claim Objection was 18 filed. By the time the Adversary Proceeding was filed, the parties had completed 19 discovery of the Claim Objection and were prepared for trial on all issues, including the 20 "debt forgiveness" issue. Accordingly, the court ordered that the Claim Objection and 21 the Adversary Proceeding be consolidated for trial. The matters have now been tried 22 before the court.

23 Background and Findings of Fact.

24 Cooper is by trade a self-employed carpenter and cabinet maker. When the 25 relevant events here began, he lived in Gardena, California. In 1996, he purchased from 26 Watson's father, James S. Moore ("Moore"), a 60-acre parcel of ranch property in 27 _____

28 23.

1 Caliente, California, which included a mobile home and a small dwelling (the "Ranch
2 Property"). Cooper continued to reside in Gardena for several years, however, the Ranch
3 Property is now his primary residence. To finance the purchase, Cooper executed two 4 promissory notes in favor of Moore, both were dated January 31, 1996. The first 5 promissory note, in the amount of $30,000, was soon paid off and after some delay, the 6 deed of trust for that obligation was reconveyed; the $30,000 note is not at issue here.

7 The second promissory note was made in the amount of $105,000. (Trial Ex. 2, 8 Aug. 1, 2013) It provided for interest at the rate of 8% per annum and monthly payments 9 in the amount of $1,003.45 to begin on April 12, 1996 "and continuing until paid" (the 10 "Moore Note" or "Note"). Cooper made those payments by depositing them into Moore's 11 bank account. Pursuant to the terms of the Note, each payment was applied first to 12 accrued and unpaid interest for the current and prior months. The holder of the Note had 13 the option to accelerate and declare the entire balance due upon default. The Moore Note 14 was secured by a deed of trust against the Ranch Property which was also dated January 15 31, 1996, and recorded shortly thereafter. James Moore died in September 1999.
16 However, Cooper did not learn of his death until about two months later. Cooper did not 17 learn that Watson was the holder of the Note until some time after that.

18 The Foreclosure and the 1998 Bankruptcy. Cooper purchased the Ranch 19 Property because, inter alia, he wanted to start a commercial chicken business. However, 20 his plans were met with some opposition from the neighboring land owners and Cooper 21 was never able to get the permits required to start the business. For various reasons, 22 Cooper began to miss payments to Moore on the Note. In June 1998, a Notice of Default 23 and Election to Sell was recorded (presumably by Moore) to commence a foreclosure 24 proceeding against the Ranch Property. A Notice of Trustee's Sale was recorded in 25 September 1998, and the foreclosure was set to take place on October 21, 1998. (Trial 26 Ex. C, Aug. 1, 2013)

27 Two days prior to the foreclosure, on October 19, 1998, Cooper filed a petition for 28 relief under chapter 13 in the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the Central District of California

(Trial Ex. 3, Aug. 1, 2013; Case No. 2:98-bk-52280-VK; the “Prior Bankruptcy”). At that time, Cooper still resided in Gardena, California. After three unsuccessful attempts to confirm a chapter 13 plan, Cooper filed his third amended plan on October 13, 1999 (Trial Ex. 14, Aug. 1, 2013; the “1999 Plan”). The 1999 Plan appears to be a standard form plan used at that time in the Central District. It listed Cooper’s obligation to Moore in Class 2 as a claim secured by real property that is the Debtor’s principal residence. By that time James Moore had passed away, but nothing had yet been filed in the Prior Bankruptcy regarding a designated successor.

The record in this case does not show that Moore filed a proof of claim in the Prior Bankruptcy. Likewise, the record is silent as to the amount then owed and the arrearage on the Moore Note. However, the 1999 Plan stated that arrearage to be in the amount of $13,970.25 and provided for monthly payments to cure the arrearage in the amount of $437.80 for a term of 36 months. The ongoing postpetition payments against the Moore Note were not provided for in the 1999 Plan and were therefore to be paid directly by Cooper as they came due. The 1999 Plan was confirmed without objection from Moore’s representative. Watson first appeared in the Prior Bankruptcy in October 2000.<sup>3</sup>

The Stay Relief Motion and Settlement. On March 18, 2004, Watson filed a motion for relief from the automatic stay which Cooper opposed (Trial Ex. 4 & 5, Aug. 1, 2013; the “Motion for Relief”). The Motion for Relief was based on Watson’s contention that Cooper had failed to make payments due under the Moore Note. Watson’s declaration filed in support of the Motion stated a “principal balance” in the original amount of the Moore Note, $105,000. It also stated “accrued prepetition payment arrearages” in the amount of $31,106.95 (31 payments) and “accrued post-petition

<sup>3</sup> The 1999 Plan was filed soon after Moore’s death and the record does not show that Watson even knew about the Prior Bankruptcy at the time the 1999 Plan was confirmed. On October 23, 2000, Watson filed a request for special notice on behalf of the James S. Moore Family Trust. Thereafter Watson, as trustee, succeeded Moore as the creditor holding the Moore Note.

1 payment arrearages” in the amount of $54,186.30 (54 payments). Watson also included a 2 claim for her attorney’s fees in the amount of $7,600 and calculated a “Total claim as of 3 March 12, 2014” in the amount of $92,893.25 (the “Stay Relief Claim”).

4 In response to the Motion for Relief, Cooper disputed Watson’s contention 5 regarding a prepetition arrearage; he filed a declaration stating that he had made all of the 6 payments required under the 1999 Plan. (Trial Ex. 5, Aug. 1, 2013.) With regard to the 7 postpetition payment arrearage, Cooper acknowledged that some number of postpetition 8 payments had not been made since Moore’s death. Cooper argued that after Moore died, 9 the bank account where Cooper had been depositing the Note payments was closed. After 10 learning of Moore’s death in November 1999, he attempted to contact Moore’s home and 11 neighbors to find out, unsuccessfully, where to send the Note payments. Accordingly, 12 Cooper prayed for denial the Stay Relief Motion, “because of the circumstances regarding 13 the death of Mr. Moore and not receiving any notice of where to send payments.”<sup>4</sup>

14 The Stay Relief Motion was set for hearing on May 4, 2004, and ultimately 15 resolved by way of a stipulated agreement. The record is silent regarding the discovery (if 16 any) and negotiations that took place in preparation for the hearing. However, at that time 17 the parties entered an oral stipulation on the record which provided for the resumption of 18 “regular payments” and three additional $10,000 payments to “clear up the arrearage 19 under the promissory note” (Trial Ex. 7, Aug. 1, 2013; the “Stay Relief Settlement”).
20 Watson’s attorney, Brenda Enderle, Esq., and Cooper’s attorney, J. Arthur Bernal, Esq., 21 made the following representation before Judge Bufford to memorialize the Stay Relief 22 Settlement:

26 _____

27 <sup>4</sup> Watson’s attorney filed a declaration in reply which raised factual issues regarding 28 Watson’s efforts to contact Cooper and Cooper’s efforts to make payments on the Moore Note.
That declaration was not admitted into evidence.

1 Ms. Enderle: We have come to an agreement that Mr. Cooper will 2 pay on the promissory note $10,000 before May 14th and beginning
 3 regular payments starting June 1st with an additional $10,000
 4 payment toward the arrearage on the promissory note by December 31st, and then by May 14th of 2005 an additional $10,000 will clear up the arrearage under the promissory note.

5 Mr. Bernal: That's correct, your Honor.

6 Trial Ex. 7, Aug. 1, 2013 (emphasis added).

7 Thereafter, the docket shows that the Motion for Relief was settled by a stipulation
 8 for adequate protection. No formal stipulation or agreement was prepared, and no order 9 was entered to memorialize the terms of the Stay Relief Settlement beyond the oral 10 statements above. The record shows that Cooper made the first two $10,000 payments in 11 May 2004 and January 2005, respectively. (Trial Ex. 1, Aug. 1, 2013.) However, he only 12 paid half of the third payment in June 2005. Cooper was unable to produce any record to 13 show that the remaining $5,000 of the Stay Relief Settlement was ever paid.

14 Cooper contends that he made all of the prepetition arrearage payments to the 15 trustee that were required under the 1999 Plan. The trustee in the Prior Bankruptcy filed 16 her final report and account in December 2005. The trustee's final report showed that 17 $13,970.25 of principal and $1,552.10 of interest had been paid by the trustee on account 18 of the "arrearage" as stated in the 1999 Plan. The report does not show the amounts and 19 dates of the payments actually made on account of the Moore Note.<sup>5</sup> Thereafter, Cooper 20 received his discharge in January 2006 and the Prior Bankruptcy was closed the following 21 November. (Trial Ex. 9, Aug. 1, 2013.)

22 The 2009 and 2010 Bankruptcies and the State Court Litigation. Cooper filed 23 a second bankruptcy case in December 2009, also in the Central District of California 24 (Case No. 2:09-bk-44785-EC). While that case was still pending, Cooper filed a third 25 bankruptcy case in March 2010, again, in the Central District (Case No. 2:10-bk-19895-26

27 <sup>5</sup> It is unknown where the trustee sent the Plan payments after Moore's death or when the 28 trustee learned of a new address for these payments.

1 VZ). However, both cases were dismissed shortly thereafter.<sup>6</sup> The record is silent 2 regarding the reason for these bankruptcy filings; however, the payment history shows 3 that Cooper had again starting missing payments on the Moore Note as early as July 2005.
4 He had failed to make numerous payments on the Note during the months before and after 5 these bankruptcies were filed.

6 In August 2011, Watson recorded a Notice of Default and Election to Sell Under 7 Deed of Trust to commence another foreclosure against the Ranch Property. (Trial Ex. D, 8 Aug. 1, 2013.) That document stated a balance then due on the Moore Note in the 9 amount of $72,548.96 plus accrued but unpaid interest. The record does not show that a 10 foreclosure sale was actually set; however, Cooper filed a civil lawsuit against Watson in 11 the Kern County Superior Court on March 14, 2012. (Trial Ex M, Aug. 1, 2013; Case 12 No. S-1500-CV-276127 NFT; the "Civil Action"). Through the Civil Action, Cooper 13 sought declaratory and injunctive relief to prevent Watson's foreclosure. The complaint 14 filed in the Civil Action raised essentially the same issues now before this court, however, 15 Cooper pled that he only owed some amount between "$17,058.65 to $22,058.54 as of 16 August 31, 2011." (Trial Ex. M, pg. 3 & pg. 8, Aug. 1, 2013.) Before a trial could be set, 17 on June 6, 2012, Cooper requested dismissal of the Civil Action because, in his attorney's 18 words, Cooper was unable to deposit with the court the amount of arrearage which he had 19 acknowledged in the complaint. (Trial Tr. 99:7-14, Aug. 1, 2013.)

20 The 2012 Bankruptcy and the Chapter 13 Plan. Soon after the Civil Action 21 was dismissed, Cooper filed this bankruptcy proceeding in the Eastern District of 22 California on September 10, 2012. Michael H. Meyer, Esq., was appointed the chapter 13 23 trustee (the "Trustee"). Watson timely filed a secured claim in the amount of
25

26
27 <sup>6</sup> The 2009 case was dismissed in April 2010 due to Cooper's failure to make plan 28 payments to the chapter 13 trustee. The 2010 case was dismissed in April 2010 due to Cooper's failure to file schedules and statements.

1 $116,103,58 (the “Watson Claim”).<sup>7</sup> Watson’s claim stated that the entire outstanding 2 balance was due and in arrears.

3 Cooper’s first modified chapter 13 plan was filed in January 2013, and confirmed 4 on October 25, 2013 (the “2013 Plan”). The 2013 Plan commits Cooper to pay the 5 Trustee $951 per month for a term of 60 months. Watson’s Claim is provided for in Class
6 1 as a “delinquent secured claim that matures after completion of this plan.” Postpetition 7 payments on Class 1 claims must be paid through the Trustee and cannot be modified 8 through the 2013 Plan. The 2013 Plan acknowledges an estimated arrearage of $16,000 9 to be paid over the term of the Plan with a monthly “arrearage dividend” in the amount of 10 $267. It also provides for monthly postpetition payments in the amount of $213, which is 11 substantially less than the monthly payment called for in the Moore Note ($1,003.45).
12 Finally, the 2013 Plan, as originally filed, included an “additional provision” which 13 purported to modify Watson’s Claim by reducing the contract installments to $213 per 14 month “beyond the five year term of the plan until the claim is paid in full.” It also 15 purported to fix the principal balance of the Claim at $20,000, to be amortized over a term 16 of ten years with interest at the rate of 5% per annum.

17 The 2013 Plan initially drew an objection from the Trustee relating to the payment 18 of attorney’s fees. That issued was subsequently resolved and withdrawn. Watson did 19 not file an objection to confirmation of the 2013 Plan and the court published a pre-20 hearing disposition to grant Cooper’s motion and confirm the 2013 Plan on April 2, 2013.
21 Cooper’s Claim Objection was filed on February 15, 2013, and was set for hearing at the 22 same time as the 2013 Plan confirmation hearing. Watson did oppose the Claim 23 Objection and it was subsequently set for an evidentiary hearing along with the Adversary 24 Proceeding.

25 The Trustee did not formally object to the Class 1 treatment of Watson’s Claim, 26

27 <sup>7</sup> Watson amended her proof of claim on October 30, 2012, and again on March 5, 2013.
28 The stated balance in the amended claims did not change and for purposes of those proceedings, the amendments were immaterial.

1 however it is clear that some negotiations took place off the record. When the Trustee 2 submitted the confirmation order for the 2013 Plan, which was approved by Cooper's 3 attorney, it contained a term which struck the "additional provision" of the 2013 Plan.
4 The court interlineated another provision in the confirmation order which limited the 5 2013 Plan's effect on the Watson Claim: "Notwithstanding anything in the plan, the 6 amount of the class 1 claim of Kathy Watson, Trustee, and the arrearage on the claim, 7 will be fixed in the contested matters currently under submission."

8 Cooper's Payment History, Watson's Proof of Claim, and the Stipulation.

9 Cooper objects to Watson's Claim based, inter alia, on his contention that Watson failed 10 to account for all of the payments he had made. Attached to the Watson Claim are copies 11 of the Moore Note and the related deed of trust. The Watson Claim also includes a list, 12 presumably based on records then available to Watson, of all payments made against the 13 Moore Note from the date of the Note, January 31, 1996, to October 4, 2012 (the "Watson 14 Accounting").<sup>8</sup> Watson's Accounting shows that Cooper began making payments on 15 April 12, 1996, as required by the terms of the Moore Note. However, he began missing 16 some payments as soon as September 1996. As time passed, the "gap" between monthly 17 payments increased, and with accrued interest, the payments he did make were not always 18 enough to reduce the principal. According to Watson's records, one payment was missed 19 in 1996, four were missed in 1997, nine in 1998, and five in 1999. One large payment in 20 the amount of $7,797.60 was made for all of the year 2000. No payments were reported 21 for 2001, 2002, and 2003. Payments resumed with some regularity in May 2004, 22 however, four more payments were missed in 2005, two were missed in 2006, two in 23 2007, five in 2008, and seven in 2009; only one payment in the amount of $3,010.35 was 24 received for 2010, and the last two were received in March and April 2011. Thereafter, 25 interest continued to accrue at the rate of $643.33 per month until this bankruptcy was

27 <sup>8</sup> Watson apparently did not have a record of the payments that had been made in the Prior 28 Bankruptcy through the chapter 13 trustee because none of those payments are reflected in her Accounting.

1 filed in September 2012. Even after the Stay Relief Settlement was announced in the 2 Prior Bankruptcy, in May 2004, Cooper continued to make irregular payments in the 3 amount as originally required in the Moore Note, $1,003.45. At no time did Cooper 4 reduce his monthly payments to the amount which the 2013 Plan purported to fix as the 5 new postpetition payment ($213).

6 During pre-trial proceedings, the court directed the parties to meet and confer and 7 try to agree upon which payments had and had not been made, which were undisputed 8 and which were in need of a resolution by evidentiary hearing. Both Cooper and his 9 attorney attended and participated in that meeting on May 29, 2013. They shared 10 documents and records, and generated a document entitled "Joint Statement of Issues in 11 Dispute and Agreement" which was signed by both attorneys and filed herein on May 30, 12 2013 (docket no. 78 - the "Stipulation"). Based on that meeting, and the documents 13 produced during the meeting, Watson essentially gave Cooper credit for a number of 14 payments that were not included in her initial Accounting.<sup>9</sup>

15 At trial, Watson introduced the expert testimony of Michael Wright, a licensed 16 certified public accountant, who had prepared an accounting using the dates and payments 17 set forth in the Stipulation.<sup>10</sup> Based on Mr. Wright's analysis, Watson again agreed to 18 reduce her Claim from $116,103.58 to $92,484.49. The court will deem the Stipulation 19 and the testimony of Mr. Wright to be an amendment of the Watson Claim. Cooper now 20 contends that he made additional payments, which were not documented during the May 21 29 meeting with the attorneys, and that the payment history set forth in the Stipulation is 22 incomplete.

23
24 <sup>9</sup> The revised accounting included in the Stipulation included numerous small payments 25 between December 2009 and June 2002. Presumably, these are the chapter 13 plan payments 26 from the Prior Bankruptcy which were not included in the original Watson Accounting.

27 <sup>10</sup> Based on Cooper's objection relating to the timelessness of Mr. Wright's accounting, the 28 court did not admit the actual written accounting prepared by Mr. Wright into evidence.
However, Mr. Wright was permitted to testify as to his methods and conclusion.

1        Issues Presented. Cooper raises two issues. First, he contends that his obligation 2 under the Moore Note was partially forgiven by the terms of the Stay Relief Settlement in 3 the Prior Bankruptcy. He contends that the phrase “will clear up the arrearage under the 4 promissory note” memorialized an agreement with Watson whereby the entire 5 postpetition arrearage (stated by Watson in the Stay Relief Motion to be $54,186.30) was 6 reduced to $30,000. In other words, Cooper contends that effective May 4, 2009 (the date 7 of the hearing on the State Relief Motion), Watson agreed to forgive $24,186.30 of the 8 balance due on the Moore Note. Watson, in turn, contends that the Stay Relief Settlement 9 was not an enforceable contract to modify or partially forgive Cooper’s obligation under 10 the Moore Note.

11        Cooper also offers an accounting, prepared by his expert witness Jerry Kemp, of 12 the payments that he contends were made against the Moore Note and a calculation of the 13 balance still due. (Trial Ex. 12, Aug. 1, 2013.) Cooper’s calculation begins in May 2004 14 with a starting balance of $93,225.17, and is based on his contention that $30,000 of that 15 sum was fixed as the arrearage through the Stay Relief Settlement.<sup>11</sup> Cooper’s accounting 16 concludes that only $36,958 was owed to Watson just prior to commencement of this 17 case. Needless to say, Cooper’s accounting is radically different than the accounting 18 offered by Watson, as modified at trial, which is based on the Stipulation and which 19 tracks the payments received since commencement of the obligation in 1996. (See 20 footnote 1, supra.) As a secondary issue, Cooper contends that the Stipulation and 21 Watson’s accounting fails to give him credit for several payments which were made, but 22 for which he has no supporting documentation.

24        <sup>11</sup> Cooper relies upon an amortization schedule prepared by Chicago Title Company 25 which was included in the exhibits (Trial Ex. 13, Aug. 1, 2013) but was not admitted into 26 evidence. That amortization schedule begins with the assumption that Cooper had timely made 27 all of the payments due on the Moore Note, which we know from the Stipulation did not happen.
28 Had he done so, according to the amortization schedule, the balance due on the Note in May 2004 would have been $63,225.17. To that, Cooper added the $30,000 “arrearage” purportedly agreed to in the Stay Relief Settlement to arrive at a May 2004 “starting balance” of $93,225.17.

1 The first issue which the court must resolve is the question of whether Cooper's 2 obligation under the Moore Note was somehow modified or partially forgiven in the Stay 3 Relief Settlement. Once that is determined, the court must decide which accounting best 4 reflects the unpaid principal and accrued interest due on the Moore Note at the 5 commencement of this bankruptcy. It is clear from the record that neither party has a 6 complete set of records regarding the payment history against the Moore Note and that an 7 exact determination of Watson's Claim will therefore be impossible to achieve.

8 Analysis and Conclusions of Law.

9 Applicable Law Regarding Proofs of Claim. A proof of claim is deemed 10 allowed unless a party in interest objects pursuant to § 502(a). A properly filed proof of 11 claim constitutes "prima facie evidence of the validity and amount of the claim" pursuant 12 to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 3001(f). When a party objects to a claim, the 13 Bankruptcy Code, the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, and the courts have "put in 14 place a general procedure to allocate the burdens of proof and persuasion in determining 15 whether a claim is allowable." Lundell v. Anchor Construction Specialists (In re 16 Lundell), 223 F.3d 1035, 1039 (9th Cir. 2000). The relative burdens for production of 17 evidence and persuasion are explained in Lundell at 1039 as follows:

18 Upon objection, the proof of claim provides "some evidence as to its 19 validity and amount" and is "strong enough to carry over a mere formal 20 objection without more." To defeat the claim, the objector must come 21 forward with sufficient evidence and "show facts tending to defeat the 22 claim by probative force equal to that of the allegations of the proofs of 23 claim themselves."

24 If the objector produces sufficient evidence to negate one or more of the 25 sworn facts in the proof of claim, the burden reverts to the claimant to prove 26 the validity of the claim by a preponderance of the evidence. (citations 27 omitted). The ultimate burden of persuasion remains at all times upon the 28 claimant.

25 Id., citations omitted.

26 Upon review of Watson's Claim, it appears that the Claim is complete and entitled 27 to the presumption of validity under Rule 3001(f). Cooper therefore has the burden of 28 producing evidence to show that the Watson Claim was improperly calculated.

1        The Moore Note and the Prior Bankruptcy. The threshold issue which must be 2 addressed is: What was Cooper's obligation under the Moore Note and what effect did 3 the Stay Relief Settlement in the Prior Bankruptcy have on that obligation? Watson 4 stepped into the Prior Bankruptcy after the death of her father and after some period of 5 time undertook efforts to enforce the Moore Note. The declaration she lodged in support 6 of the Stay Relief Motion appears to have been incorrect, at least with regard to the 7 prepetition arrearages that Cooper was paying through the 1999 Plan. If Watson did not 8 then have good records with regard to payment of the prepetition arrearages, it is safe to 9 infer that she did not have complete records with regard to the postpetition payments, 10 many of which were either paid to her father or not paid after his death. Since we do not 11 have anything filed by Mr. Moore to show what was owed at the commencement of the 12 1998 Bankruptcy, neither is it possible to state with accuracy what was owed when 13 Watson filed the Stay Relief Motion.

14        Cooper argues that Watson made an "admission" in the Stay Relief Motion that her 15 Claim at that time was only $92,893.25, the above-referenced Stay Relief Claim.
16 However, Cooper misinterprets the information filed in support of the Stay Relief Motion.
17 The number provided in paragraph 6, line f, of the Stay Relief Motion (Trial Ex. 4, pg. 5, 18 Aug. 1, 2013), is a calculation of the pre and postpetition arrearages, plus the attorney's 19 fees; it is not a statement of the total principal and accrued interest then owing on the 20 Moore Note. The Stay Relief Motion erroneously states the "principal" portion to be 21 $105,000, however, we know from the payment history that the principal balance of the 22 Moore Note had been partially paid down by the time the Stay Relief Motion was filed.
23 The court therefore cannot use the Stay Relief Claim as a starting point for calculating the 24 balance owed at the commencement of this case.

25        As late as the meeting between the attorneys in May 2013, Watson accepted 26 documents from Cooper reflecting payments that she did not have in her records and 27 based thereon has stipulated to reduce her Claim by more than $23,000. Cooper's records 28 were also incomplete. As late as March 2012, when Cooper filed the Civil Action to 1 prevent Watson's foreclosure, he alleged that he only owed some amount between 2 $17,058 and $22,058. Neither of those numbers is reconcilable with his prayer in this 3 proceeding. Even at the trial of this matter, Cooper was unable to produce documents to 4 support many of the payments he "remembered" making.

5 Despite the "arrearage" stated in the 1999 Plan, there has never been an 6 adjudication that the 1999 Plan was accurate. Nevertheless, Cooper contends that he 7 cured the prepetition arrearage through the 1999 Plan and that Watson subsequently 8 agreed to partially forgive and reduce the outstanding balance due on the Moore Note by 9 approximately $24,000. Watson responds that the Stay Relief Settlement was simply an 10 agreement to resolve, for that time, a disputed issue regarding relief from the automatic 11 stay and that it was never intended to constitute a partial forgiveness, or effort to fix the 12 balance due on the Moore Note. Based on the brevity and ambiguity of the Stay Relief 13 Settlement, the notable absence of good records, and the subsequent conduct of the 14 parties, the court finds Watson's argument to be more persuasive.

15 "A modification of a contract is a change in the obligations of a party by a 16 subsequent mutual agreement of the parties."<sup>12</sup> Secrest v. Sec. Nat'l Mortg. Loan Trust 17 2002-2, 167 Cal. App. 4th 544, 553 (2008). A written contract may be modified by a 18 subsequent written or oral agreement. See Cal. Civ. Code § 1698. The party seeking to 19 enforce an oral modification of a written contract bears the burden of proving the 20 necessary elements of an oral modification by the preponderance of the evidence. See 21 Barret v. Bank of Am., 183 Cal. App. 3d 1362, 1370 (1986).

22 In support of the Stay Relief Motion, Watson filed a declaration stating that 23 postpetition arrearages were then owed in excess of $54,000. Cooper first argues that the 24 parties agreed, through the Stay Relief Settlement, to reduce that number to $30,000.
25 Rather than requiring that Cooper cure the postpetition arrearages of $54,186.30 in full, 26 the Stay Relief Settlement allowed Cooper to make three semiannual payments of 27

28 <sup>12</sup> Cooper is not arguing that the oral stipulation constituted a novation or an accord.

1 $10,000 each. In essence, Cooper contends that this agreement constituted an enforceable
2 modification of the Moore Note and operated to forgive any remaining postpetition 3 arrearages (approximately $24,000) once the three payments were made. However, 4 Cooper's argument is unpersuasive for two reasons.

5 Mutual Consent. First, the court is not persuaded that there was mutual consent 6 to forgive the sum of $24,000 or to fix the balance then due on the Moore Note. A 7 contract can "be subsequently modified with the assent of the parties thereto, provided the 8 same elements essential to the validity of the original contract are present." Carlson, 9 Collins, Gordon & Bold v. Banducci, 257 Cal. App. 2d 212, 223 (1967) (citation omitted).
10 One of these elements is the need for mutual consent by the contracting parties. See Cal.
11 Civ. Code §§ 1550, 1565; Wade v. Diamond A Cattle Co., 44 Cal. App. 3d 453, 457 12 (1975). "Consent is not mutual, unless the parties all agree upon the same thing in the 13 same sense." Cal. Civ. Code § 1580. In other words, "there is no contract until there has 14 been a meeting of the minds on all material points." Banner Entm't v. Superior Court, 62 15 Cal. App. 4th 348, 357–58 (1998) (emphasis original). Further, "the failure to reach a 16 meeting of the minds on all material points prevents the formation of a contract even 17 though the parties have orally agreed upon some of the terms, or have taken some action 18 related to the contract." Id. at 359 (emphasis omitted).

19 "Mutual consent is determined under an objective standard applied to the outward 20 manifestations or expressions of the parties, i.e., the reasonable meaning of their words 21 and acts, and not their unexpressed intentions or understandings." Bustamante v. Intuit, 22 Inc., 141 Cal. App. 4th 199, 208 (2006). Mutual consent is a question of fact. ASP
23 Props. Grp. v. Fard, Inc., 133 Cal. App. 4th 1257, 1269 (2005). "If there is no evidence 24 establishing a manifestation of assent to the 'same thing' by both parties, then there is no 25 mutual consent and no contract formation." Weddington Prods., Inc. v. Flick, 60 Cal.
26 App. 4th 793, 811 (1998).

27 Here, the forgiveness of $24,000 would clearly be a material term of the Stay 28 Relief Settlement. Yet, there was no objective evidence to show that the parties mutually

1 agreed to do that. The only evidence presented on this issue was the transcript from the 2 May 4, 2004, hearing. However, that evidence is too ambiguous and inconclusive to 3 show what was actually in dispute and what the parties were actually agreeing to.
4 Watson's attorney's brief recitation on the record, that the resumption of regular 5 payments and the addition of three semiannual payments of $10,000 will "clear up the 6 arrearage under the promissory note" does not unambiguously establish that Watson was 7 unconditionally forgiving the balance of the postpetition arrearages. Indeed, the oral 8 statement on May 4 appears to raise more questions than it answers. Neither party had 9 complete records of the payment history. Were the parties agreeing that the postpetition 10 arrearage was only $30,000 or were they agreeing to forgive any arrearage above that 11 number? If so, what was the actual arrearage from which the reduction would apply? If 12 the parties were agreeing to fix a new balance owing under the Moore Note, what was 13 that number and what were they starting from? Since the Stipulation came in the context 14 of a contested motion for relief from stay, the more logical explanation would be that 15 Watson would suspend her quest to foreclose on the Ranch Property so long as Cooper 16 resumed regular Note payments and paid the additional $30,000. If Cooper intended the 17 Stay Relief Settlement to mean more than that, why didn't Cooper's attorney make any 18 effort to supplement the record with more details? Notably, absent from the record is any 19 specific statement as to the "debt forgiveness" issue. Nothing in the record suggests what 20 the new balance owing on the Moore Note would be and certainly nothing was agreed to 21 with regard to a reduction of the monthly payments. Indeed, Cooper continued to make 22 irregular payments to Watson in the original amount.

23 The Absence of Performance and Consideration. Even assuming that there was 24 initially a meeting of the minds with regard to the modification and partial forgiveness of 25 debt, that agreement would be unenforceable under applicable law based on the lack of 26 performance and consideration. As § 1698 of the California Civil Code provides, a 27 subsequent oral agreement may modify a written contract only under certain 28 circumstances:

1 (b) A contract in writing may be modified by an oral agreement to the extent that 2 the oral agreement is executed by the parties.

3 (c) Unless the contract otherwise expressly provides, a contract in writing may be 4 modified by an oral agreement supported by new consideration. The statute of frauds (Section 1624) is required to be satisfied if the contract as modified is within its provisions.

5 Cal. Civ. Code §§ 1698(b) & (c).

6 Thus, a party can generally enforce an oral modification of a written contract when 7 that oral modification has been executed or supported by new consideration.<sup>13</sup> However, 8 Cooper has not established that the Stay Relief Settlement meets either of these additional 9 requirements.

10 The term “‘Executed’ in [California Civil Code] § 1698(b) has the normal meaning 11 of that term in contract law. That is, the agreement must have been fully performed.”
12 Fanucchi & Limi Farms v. United Agri Prods., 414 F.3d 1075, 1081 (9th Cir. 2005); 13 accord Cal. Civ. Code § 1661 (“An executed contract is one, the object of which is fully 14 performed. All others are executory.”). Here, Cooper did not fully perform under the 15 Stay Relief Settlement. He did not thereafter make regular monthly payments due under 16 the Moore Note (as evidenced by the payment history and the subsequent foreclosure 17 action commenced by Watson) and he did not pay in full the third and final cure payment, 18 having only paid $5,000 of the required $10,000.

19 In addition, Watson received no consideration for the debt forgiveness. A 20 “supplemental agreement either adding to or varying the terms of the original contract, so 21 as to impose new and onerous burdens upon one of the parties, requires a consideration to 22 support it.” Krobitzsch v. Middleton, 72 Cal. App. 2d 804, 808 (1946). “There must be 23 some consideration flowing from the obligor, either a benefit to the obligee or a detriment

25 <sup>13</sup> Subdivision (c) of California Civil Code § 1698 also requires that the statute of frauds 26 be satisfied if the contract as modified falls within the statute of frauds. See Secrest, 167 Cal.
27 App. 4th at 553. A modification of a note and deed of trust is subject to the statute of frauds.
28 See id. However, if the statute of frauds is not properly raised, it may be forfeited. Id. at 551.
Here, Watson has not raised a statute-of-frauds argument. Therefore, the court has no need to consider the issue.

1 to the obligor for which the obligee bargained, before a modification . . . can be found.”
2 Hunt v. Smyth, 25 Cal. App. 3d 807, 819 (1972); see also Cal. Civ. Code § 1605 (defining 3 “good consideration”). However, the obligor’s performance of what he is already legally 4 obligated to perform is not sufficient consideration for purposes of a modification.
5 Greenamyre Eng’g & Tech., Inc. v. Mediscan Research, Ltd. (In re Mediscan Research, 6 Ltd.), 109 B.R. 392, 395 (9th Cir. BAP 1989), aff’d, 940 F.3d 558 (9th Cir. 1991).

7 Here, Cooper has not shown that Watson received any consideration in exchange
8 for a substantial forgiveness of debt. Cf. D.L. Godbey & Sons Constr. Co. v. Deane, 39 9 Cal. 2d 429, 432 (1952) (noting that “executed agreements that might otherwise [be 10 unenforceable] for lack of consideration” include “agreements to accept less than is due 11 under the terms of a written contract”). Under the Stay Relief Settlement, Cooper 12 promised to make three payments totaling $30,000. However, that cannot be considered 13 new consideration because Cooper was already obligated to pay substantially a greater 14 amount under the Moore Note. See Stroud v. Thomas, 139 Cal. 274, 276 (1903) (“[T]he 15 payment of money on the obligation already existing and past due . . . merely satisfie[s] to 16 that extent the debt due, and [does] not constitute a consideration for the [new] 17 agreement.”).

18 Based on the foregoing, the court is not persuaded that the Stay Relief Settlement 19 in the Prior Bankruptcy was anything more than an agreement by Watson to withdraw her 20 Stay Relief Motion and not pursue the pending foreclosure against the Ranch Property.
21 Indeed, that is exactly what Watson did. She ceased prosecution of the Stay Relief 22 Motion and took no further action to enforce the Moore Note until 2011 when she started 23 a new foreclosure proceeding. The Stay Relief Settlement did not operate to forgive 24 $24,000 of the outstanding balance due on the Moore Note and it certainly was not 25 effective to fix a new balance going forward.

26 Calculation of Watson’s Claim: Evidentiary Effect of the Stipulation. The 27 court has now determined that Cooper’s obligation under the Moore Note was not 28 modified or partially forgiven in the Prior Bankruptcy. The final task is to decide which 1 accounting offered by the parties best reflects the balance due on the obligation at the 2 commencement of this bankruptcy. The accounting offered by Cooper is premised on 3 two assumptions: (1) that the underlying obligation was partially forgiven; and (2) that a 4 new balance of $93,225.17 was implicitly fixed by agreement of the parties in May 2004.

5 First, Cooper offers no admissible evidence to support a finding with regard to the 6 $93,225.17 number. (See footnote 10, supra.) Second, the court cannot make a finding 7 that any debt was forgiven by Watson. Even if the court were to consider the debt 8 forgiveness, there is no admissible evidence as to what number that adjustment should 9 apply to. The court must therefore reject Cooper's accounting.

10 Watson's accounting, in turn, is based on the payment history reflected in the 11 Stipulation and the analysis of Watson's expert witness.<sup>14</sup> At trial, Cooper testified that 12 the Stipulation signed by his counsel fails to include a number of payments for which he 13 had no supporting documents. However, the court is bound here to apply the information 14 contained in the Stipulation and cannot accept Cooper's conflicting testimony.<sup>15</sup>

15 Cooper contends, inter alia, that Watson failed to account for a large number of 16 payments made on the underlying promissory note after the death of Mr. Moore.
17 However, that issue appears to have been resolved by the parties in the Stipulation.
18 Cooper is, in essence, asking the court to ignore the Stipulation and consider new 19 evidence not offered or considered during the May 29 meeting, regarding the number of 20 payments for which he should be given credit. "Stipulations are entered into in order to 21 dispense with proof over matters not in issue, thereby judicial economy at the 22 convenience of the parties." United States v. McGregor, 529 F.2d 928, 931 (9th Cir.
23 1976). As the Supreme Court has recently stated, "Litigants, we have long recognized,

25 <sup>14</sup> Both parties introduced testimony from qualified expert witnesses. Both experts used a 26 well recognized software program to analyze the stream of payment information they had been 27 given by their clients and arrive at a conclusion regarding the balance owed on the Moore Note.

28 <sup>15</sup> The court notes that Cooper did not move to vacate the Stipulation after it was filed or at any time prior to trial.

1 '[a]re entitled to have [their] case tried upon the assumption that . . . facts, stipulated into 2 the record, were established.'" Christian Legal Soc'y v. Martinez, 130 S. Ct. 2971, 2983
 3 (2010) (alterations in original) (quoting H. Hackfeld & Co. v. United States, 197 U.S. 442, 4 447 (1905)). Such "factual stipulations are 'formal concessions . . . that have the effect of 5 withdrawing a fact from issue and dispensing wholly with the need for proof of the fact.
 6 Thus, a judicial admission . . . is conclusive in the case.'" Id. (quoting 2 Kenneth S.
 7 Broun, McCormick on Evidence § 254, at 181 (6th ed. 2006)). As a result, "[o]nce a 8 stipulation of fact is made, the one party need offer no evidence to provide it and the other 9 is not allowed to disprove it." United States ex rel. Miller v. Bill Harbert Int'l Constr., 10 Inc., 608 F.3d 871, 889 (D.C. Cir. 2010).

11 Even if the court could consider Cooper's conflicting testimony regarding 12 additional unapplied payments, the court found that testimony to be profoundly 13 unreliable. As the trier of fact, the bankruptcy court is entitled to evaluate a witness's 14 credibility and to determine whether to believe the testimony or not. Beauchamp v.
 15 Hoose (In re Beauchamp), 236 B.R. 727, 731 (9th Cir. BAP 1999), aff'd mem. 5 F. App'x 16 743 (9th Cir. 2001). "When the testimony of a witness is not believed, [the bankruptcy 17 court, as] the trier of fact[,] may simply disregard it." Bose Corp. v. Consumers Union of 18 U.S., Inc., 466 U.S. 485, 512 (1984).

19 Here, Cooper had a very clear memory as to what he had actually paid many, many 20 years ago on the Moore Note (even without any documentary evidence of such payments).
 21 During trial, Cooper made the following statements: (1) he remembered making all 9
 22 monthly payments in 1996, rather than the stipulated 8 (Trial Tr. 69:9–16, Aug. 1, 2013);
 23 (2) he remembered making all 12 monthly payments in 2005, rather than the stipulated 10
 24 (Trial Tr. 72:21–73:10, Aug. 1, 2013); and (3) he remembered making either 11 or 12
 25 monthly payments in 2007, rather than the stipulated 10 (Trial Tr. 73:21–74:3, Aug. 1, 26 2013). At the same time, Cooper had difficulty remembering other seemingly more 27 significant events, such as whether any foreclosures were pending when he filed his 28 previous bankruptcies. For example, when asked about the numerous bankruptcy filings

(in 1998, 2009, 2010, and 2012) and whether the Ranch Property was the subject of a foreclosure proceeding, Cooper could not give a definitive response, answering, "Not . . . I don't recall that exactly. But probably yes." (Trial Tr. 76:14-17, Aug. 1, 2013.) Additionally, Cooper was vague and uncertain as to the document that was filed to commence this bankruptcy case (Trial Tr. 76: 18-77:14, Aug. 1, 2013), and he did not recall what he had alleged in the Civil Action regarding the balance due on the Moore Note. (Trial Tr. 88:8-17, Aug. 1, 2013.) Because Cooper has exhibited a selective memory, where he clearly remembers every payment against the Note since 1996, while failing to recall other more recent and seemingly important facts, the court cannot find Cooper's testimony to be credible or reliable on the payment history issue.

Conclusion.

Based on the foregoing, the court is not persuaded that Watson agreed to modify or partially forgive any of Cooper's obligation under the Moore Note during the Prior Bankruptcy. In addition, the court is persuaded that Watson's accounting as modified by the Stipulation of the parties, and the testimony of Watson's expert witness, more accurately reflects the payments that were made by Cooper for application to the Moore Note and the balance owing on the Moore Note at the commencement of this case. Accordingly, judgment will be entered for Watson in the Adversary Proceeding. Cooper's Claim Objection will be overruled and Watson's Claim, reflecting the balance due at the commencement of this case, will be allowed in the amount of $92,484.49. The parties shall bear their own costs and attorney's fees.
